Capital Salutes Reagan

WASHINGTON | With the storied riderless horse symbolizing the fallen president, Ronald Reagan's casket rolled on a century-old caisson to the Capitol on Wednesday for final tributes from high officials and common Americans in the first presidential state funeral in three decades.

The 40th president lay in state under a dome where public servants from Abraham Lincoln forward have been honored. People stood by the thousands in quiet witness to his funeral procession along the broad expanse of Constitution Avenue and waited hours in steamy heat to pay last respects in the Capitol Rotunda.

"Fellow Americans, here lies a graceful and a gallant man," said Vice President Dick Cheney, speaking at the state funeral ceremony opening the 34-hour period of Reagan's lying in state. "It was the vision and the will of Ronald Reagan that gave hope to the oppressed, shamed the oppressors and ended the evil empire."

Crowds 15 deep watched the Washington procession. Drums sounded, marking the cadence of the marchers, and cheers briefly broke out for Nancy Reagan at the head of the procession.

In her husband's death as in his life, she was beside him at every step. When his casket reached the landing of the Capitol, she reached out and touched it. She gazed at it, as she had so often gazed at him in life.

President Bush planned to return to Washington from the Group of Eight meeting in Georgia on Thursday. Aides said Bush would visit the casket Thursday evening.

Bush and his father, who was Reagan's vice president and succeeded him in the White House, will be among the eulogists Friday.

they had to go, the Palm Beach Post reported. Local beekeepers started removing at least 700,000 bees from a tower above his breakfast nook on Tuesday, filling four buckets with honey weighing close to 65 pounds. (AP) EyeOpeners | Page 2

Nonetheless, the 5-year-old Jack Russell terrier has had her paintings exhibited in New York, Los Angeles and Europe. KIDS THESE DAYS A Passing Fad

Induced fainting by middle school students looking to experience a "rush" has set off alarm bells in Cape Elizabeth, Maine. The behavior became an issue last week when teachers at Cape Elizabeth Middle School learned students were going through a regimen in which they blocked the flow of oxygen to their brains, which caused them to lose consciousness. Students told staff members it gave them a "rush" or "good feeling." Teachers and parents in the Portland suburb are warning students that they risk injuries and brain damage when they deliberately make themselves pass out. The process involves deliberately hyperventilating, bending over and standing up quickly, and then holding the neck to restrict blood flow to the brain. Induced fainting among middle and high school students stretches back decades and has occurred in towns and cities throughout the country, educators said. (AP)

PRANKS

You Got Fork'd

Students in Lansdale, Pa., trying to revive the venerable custom of the senior prank, stuck about 35,000 plastic forks into two grassy areas at North Penn High School in time for the beginning of classes Monday. Senior Tom McDonald told The Reporter newspaper he and other students collected the forks all school year during lunchtime and from businesses. Police nabbed some of the students, including McDonald, during the overnight forking, but seemed to get the joke. "Once we told them what we were doing," McDonald said, "they said they never laughed so hard in their lives."

Court OKs $80M Verdict Against Cigarette Maker

A state appeals court Wednesday reaffirmed an $80 million verdict against cigarette maker Philip Morris in the case of an Oregon janitor who died of lung cancer. The U.S. Supreme Court had ordered the Oregon court to re-examine the 1999 verdict. The state court concluded that the award was justified because Philip Morris knowingly marketed a harmful product for decades. (AP)

Crowds Line Reagan's Route

Supporters in Calif., D.C. pay their respects

POINT MUGU, CALIF. | Crowds lined the roads and watched from overpasses in California on Wednesday as President Reagan's body began its journey from the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library in Simi Valley, Calif., to the U.S. Capitol in Washington.

A 45-minute motorcade brought the casket to Point Mugu, where hundreds of civilians and sailors in white waited under the clearing blue sky.

During the drive to Point Mugu, crowds watched as the procession headed along U.S. 101. Traffic on the opposite side of the freeway came to a halt and some drivers got out and stood with hands over their hearts.

More than 100,000 admirers had filed past the former president's coffin at the library in a steady stream of well-wishers that continued past nightfall Tuesday.

Before the takeoff, in a simple runway ceremony with the former first lady watching, the flag-draped casket was carried from a hearse as a Marine Corps band played "Hail to the Chief," "God Bless America" and "Amazing Grace."

Reagan was returning in death to a Congress he loved to scold. Seventeen years ago, he compared Democratic lawmakers to the "screeching" periodic cicadas that then — and again this spring — have infested the city.

Those battles were bygone Wednesday in a tribute drawing together Republicans who idolized Reagan and Democrats who liked him even while abhorring some of his conservative policies.

Capitol Evacuated After Plane Scare

WASHINGTON | Lawmakers, dignitaries and mourners preparing for Ronald Reagan's funeral ceremony raced from the Capitol Wednesday after police feared an airplane was headed for the building and warned: "You have one minute to impact."

Within minutes, authorities determined the small plane was carrying Kentucky Gov. Ernie Fletcher to the funeral and had mistakenly entered restricted airspace around the capital.

The building was reopened at around 4:30 p.m. EDT.

During the period of uncertainty, police had hustled House Speaker Dennis Hastert — second in line to the presidency — away in a secured motorcade.

At the Supreme Court, police gathered several of the justices and whisked them away in cars. Police in the Capitol had urged people running down staircases to run faster.

"Incoming plane!" a police officer shouted at reporters asking what was going on. JESSE J. HOLLAND (AP)

Terror Fight Lacking Cash

Ridge blames Congress for shortfalls to cities at higher risk of attack

WASHINGTON | The Bush administration said Wednesday that Congress was to blame for not providing enough homeland security money to cities at a high risk of being attacked by terrorists.

A conflict between rural and urban lawmakers emerged in a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing in which Homeland Security Secretary Tom Ridge faced criticism that he had failed to correct imbalances in the program. He said it was Congress that had not moved on the issue.

Homeland Security officials have said they want to redirect billions of dollars in grants following two years of complaints that less populated areas receive anti-terror aid they don't need while major cities like New York don't get nearly enough.

Ridge decided last year to send more money to 50 cities and 30 transit systems designated as high-density threat targets. Originally that list had only seven cities: New York, Los Angeles, Washington, Chicago, Houston, San Francisco and Seattle.

The grants are designed to provide cash-strapped state and local police, fire and emergency medical agencies with training and equipment, for everything from handheld radiological detectors to state-of-the-art patrol boats and trucks.

Fueling the fight is legislation by Rep. Chris Cox, a California Republican, that would scrap the current spread-it-around system and apportion $4.3 billion in homeland security grants to states and localities based strictly on threat analysis. DEVLIN BARRETT (AP)

N.Y. Child-Care Walkout Leaves Parents in Bind

NEW YORK | Child-care workers who look after as many as 50,000 youngsters walked off the job Wednesday in New York's second major strike this week by unions trying to pressure the city for a raise.

The scheduled three-day strike left some 350 large day-care centers closed or short-staffed, and forced many working parents to scramble to find baby sitters.

The day-care workers, who are employed by centers that serve many poor families and are partially subsidized by the city, have not had a contract in more than four years and have not gotten a raise in more than three years.

"We've waited too long!" Michael Green, a union director, said at a rally outside City Hall that swelled to more than 1,500 people.

Home health-care workers also staged the final day of their own walkout for raises to $10 per hour from an average of about $7.

Mayor Michael Bloomberg said parents who use the affected day-care centers would be reimbursed for replacement child care. (AP)

Scientists Link Aging To Genes

Genetic changes in brain after age 40 may affect mental function

INDIANAPOLIS | Scientists say they've found a "genetic signature" of aging in the human brain — changes in key genes that may be linked to deteriorating mental function as we get older.

The study suggests that some genes start working less hard after age 40, at least in some people.

The results don't prove that such changes cause mental decline. But other scientists said they offer important insight into how the brain changes with age.

In the study, the researchers from The Children's Hospital and Harvard Medical School analyzed brain tissue from 30 deceased people ranging in age from 26 to 106, looking at some 11,000 genes.

After age 40, they found, about 400 genes showed significant changes in how hard they had been working to instruct cells to make certain proteins. Many of those genes were damaged and could not function properly.

The findings were published online Wednesday by the journal Nature. RICK CALLAHAN (AP)

NATO Allies Split Over Role in Iraq

At G-8 summit in Ga., Bush, Chirac disagree on group's postwar role

SEA ISLAND, GA. | Seeking to build on rare harmony with Europe after a successful U.N. vote, President Bush on Wednesday proposed a wider but unspecified role for NATO in Iraq. But French President Jacques Chirac immediately objected.

Bush discussed the possible expanded role for the North Atlantic Treaty Organization during a meeting with British Prime Minister Tony Blair at the Group of Eight economic summit on Sea Island, Ga.

"We will work with our NATO friends to at least continue the role that now exists, and hopefully expand it somewhat," Bush said.

NEW FACE: Bush also used the G-8 summit to introduce Iraq's new president, Ghazi al-Yawer. The two met privately Wednesday to discuss Iraq's reconstruction efforts.

But Chirac told reporters that, while he is open to discussion on NATO's role, he has reservations. "I do not believe it is NATO's purpose to intervene in Iraq," he said.

Despite the dispute over NATO's role, the eight countries — the United States, Britain, Canada, France, Germany, Italy, Japan and Russia — endorsed Bush's idea of working toward reform in the Middle East, but tied such an effort to resolving the Arab-Israeli conflict. TOM RAUM (AP)

Enemy Fire Caused Blast That Killed 6

WARSAW, POLAND | Enemy mortar fire caused a munitions dump explosion in Iraq that killed six European soldiers who were defusing Saddam-era ordnance, a special military commission said Wednesday.

One Latvian, three Slovakian and two Polish soldiers were killed in the explosion near the city of Suwariyah on Tuesday.

"The deaths did not result from any inappropriate action during the defusing, but it was the result of a mortar attack," said Polish Gen. Piotr Czerwinski.

The soldiers were killed when a pile of some 100 anti-tank and 300 smaller shells exploded. Another Polish soldier was heavily burned in the explosion.

Czerwinski said investigators found three 82mm mortar craters near the site, and estimated the rounds were fired from one to two miles away. It is not known who carried out the attack, he said. (AP)

Iraqi Oil Pipeline Hit by Saboteurs

Attack on major line brings down 10% of country's power grid

BAGHDAD | Saboteurs blew up a key northern oil pipeline Wednesday, forcing a 10 percent cut on the national power grid as demand for electricity rises with the advent of Iraq's broiling summer heat.

The pipeline blast near Beiji, 155 miles north of Baghdad, was the latest in a series of attacks by insurgents against infrastructure targets, possibly to shake public confidence as a new Iraqi government prepares to take power June 30.

The attack on the pipeline — which carries fuel to the Beiji power station, one of Iraq's largest — forced a 10 percent cutback in the country's 4,000-megawatt production, Assem Jihad, an Oil Ministry spokesman, told Dow Jones Newswires.

The U.S.-run coalition had made its ability to guarantee adequate electricity supplies a benchmark of success in restoring normalcy to Iraq. However, sabotage and frayed infrastructure have impeded efforts to eliminate power outages, especially in the capital.

More than a year after the occupation began, power cuts are common nationwide, in some places topping 16 hours a day. Meanwhile, gunfire rang out Wednesday night in the Shiite holy city of Najaf for the first time since an agreement last week to end weeks of bloody fighting between American soldiers and militiamen loyal to radical cleric Muqtada al-Sadr.

Residents said gunmen attacked a police station near Najaf's Revolution of 1920 Square, and it appeared American troops were not involved. DANICA KIRKA (AP)

→ Four members of an Iraqi force in charge of Fallujah were wounded Wednesday when a mortar round exploded. An Iraqi officer said the attackers may have been firing at U.S. troops.

→ A group holding two hostages, a Turk and an Egyptian, threatened to kill them after Friday prayers unless their governments condemn U.S. actions in Iraq. The threat was made in a statement distributed in Fallujah.

→ Insurgents attacked a Baghdad city council member, wounding him and killing two of his bodyguards, the military said.

20 Fighters Killed in Pakistan

No indication that top al Qaeda figures involved

PESHAWAR, PAKISTAN | Pakistani forces clashed with heavily armed foreign militants Wednesday, killing more than 20 people in a mountainous tribal region near the Afghan border where hundreds of al Qaeda fighters are believed to be hiding, officials said.

The area is a possible hideout for Osama bin Laden and his chief aide, Ayman al-Zawahiri, but there was no immediate indication that top al Qaeda figures were among those involved in the clash.

The bloodshed follows weeks of failed efforts to get the militants in South Waziristan to surrender to authorities by peaceful means after an army offensive in March that left 120 people dead.

Brig. Mahmood Shah, security chief for Pakistan's tribal regions, said foreigners and tribesmen holed up in four fortress-like houses near the Afghan border traded fire with paramilitary and army forces.

Shah said about 20 foreign militants and one paramilitary soldier had been killed, and three civilians had died in the crossfire. Seven of the dead had already been buried, while others were lying in ravines and could not be recovered, he said.

Officials gave no information about the nationalities and the identities of those killed and captured in the clash west of Wana, the main town in South Waziristan.

Tension has been building in the area as authorities have pressured tribesmen to evict hundreds of Central Asian, Arab and Afghan militants, many of whom moved there from Afghanistan after the fall of the Taliban regime.

The militants have refused to register with authorities despite a government amnesty offer that would allow them to settle in Pakistan if they renounce terrorism and abide by national laws.

The army has repeatedly warned that another military operation could be launched unless the foreign militants give themselves up.

Suspect in Italy Spoke Of U.S. Plot

Man reportedly talked about woman ready to launch chemical attack

ROME | An Italian prosecutor said Wednesday he had provided U.S. authorities with transcripts of phone calls between terror suspects, including one that reportedly refers to a woman ready to carry out a chemical attack in the United States.

The two terror suspects — Rabie Osman Ahmed, an Egyptian believed to be behind the March 11 train bombings in Madrid, and a Palestinian identified as Yahia Payumi — were arrested Tuesday in Milan, said Maurizio Romanelli.

In one of the intercepted phone conversations, Osman Ahmed refers to a woman ready to carry out a chemical attack in America, the ANSA news agency reported. When asked about the content of the transcripts, Romanelli did not dispute the news reports, but he said he would not comment further on the content of the wiretaps.

The wiretaps refer to "small groups ready to carry out suicide attacks," he said. The likely location of the attacks was Iraq, he said, without giving further details.

Viviana Bossi, defense lawyer for the two suspects, said Wednesday that her clients "deny they are terrorists." AIDAN LEWIS (AP)

Study: U.S. Military Spending Is Half Of World's Total

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN | World military spending surged in 2003, reaching $956 billion, nearly half of it by the United States as it paid for missions in Iraq, Afghanistan and the war on terror, a prominent European think tank said Wednesday.

Spending rose by 11 percent, the Stockholm International Peace Research Institute said, up 18 percent from 2001. The United States led the world in defense spending, accounting for 47 percent, followed by Japan with 5 percent and Britain, France and China, with 4 percent each.

The $956 billion spent on defense costs worldwide corresponded to 2.7 percent of the world's gross domestic product, according to the annual report.

"It's very close to the Cold War peak in 1987," said SIPRI researcher Elisabeth Skoens, who co-authored the report.

The 2003 rise in defense spending coincided with a decrease in the number of conflicts worldwide, which fell to 19, the second-lowest since the think tank began issuing the reports 35 years ago. (AP)

Venezuela's Chavez Faces Aug. 15 Recall

CARACAS, VENEZUELA | President Hugo Chavez must face a recall vote on Aug. 15, elections officials said, moving a step closer to the possible ouster of a leftist government hostile to the United States, Venezuela's biggest customer for crude oil.

Francisco Carrasquero, president of Venezuela's elections council, announced late Tuesday that Chavez's opposition had gathered 2.54 million signatures to demand the recall, surpassing the 2.43 million — 20 percent of the electorate — required by the constitution.

To recall Chavez, Venezuela's opposition needs to win more than the 3.7 million votes he received during his 2000 election. (AP)

BY THE NUMBERS: According to a poll published Wednesday in the Times of London, 32% of Britons say they support Prince Charles marrying longtime lover Camilla Parker Bowles, while 29% say they are opposed to it. Each group is outnumbered by those who say they don't care, however. Thirty-eight percent say they don't care, while 2% have no opinion. (AP)

Clear Channel Fined $1.75M

FCC sanctions radio chain over indecency claims

MEDIA | The nation's largest radio chain has agreed to a record settlement to resolve indecency complaints against Howard Stern and other radio personalities, federal regulators announced Wednesday.

The Federal Communications Commission's $1.75 million deal with Clear Channel Communications is the largest settlement negotiated by the FCC and a broadcaster. It narrowly tops the $1.7 million that Infinity Broadcasting paid in 1995 for indecency violations by Stern, whose New York City-based radio show features sexually explicit talk and off-color humor.

FCC Chairman Michael Powell praised the settlement as a victory for the American public.

"Clear Channel has now formally admitted that it violated the law and has made binding commitments to clean up its act," Powell said in a statement. He said the radio giant would train its on-air personalities and employees on indecency laws, and suspend and fire those who violate the rules.

The agreement settles fines proposed by the agency against Clear Channel for remarks Stern made in an April 2003 broadcast. It also covers several dozen open investigations and pending cases stemming from listener complaints lodged against shows on Clear Channel stations.

The FCC previously proposed a $495,000 fine for Stern's show, which aired on six of Clear Channel's 1,200-plus stations. The company has since yanked Stern from its airwaves, though he is still heard on dozens of Infinity's stations. (AP)

CREATIVITY IN THE COCKPIT

With high oil prices stifling the airline industry's recovery, U.S. carriers are finding ways to cut back on the amount of fuel they use, placing an emphasis on fuel efficiency not seen in years.

● United's low-fare unit, Ted, reduced the maximum flying speed of its planes from 530 mph to 516 mph over Memorial Day weekend, saving about 3,000 gallons of fuel. United is considering making the change fleetwide.

● American Airlines in late May began flying trans-Atlantic flights with half as much emergency fuel in its tanks, lightening the jetliners' loads. The move is expected to save the company about $10.5 million in 2004.

● At JetBlue Airways, pilots are using one engine instead of two to taxi along congested runways. (AP)

Justice Dept. Rebuffs FCC Bid to Restore Phone Rules

TELECOM | In a setback for federal regulators, Solicitor General Theodore Olson has decided against an appeal to the Supreme Court to revive new rules aimed at increasing competition for local telephone service, according to the Federal Communications Commission.

The agency issued a statement Wednesday saying it was informed by Olson's office of his decision. It can still appeal on its own, but the court would have been more likely to consider the case had the Justice Department joined the appeal.

The FCC issued rules in August allowing states to require the major regional companies — Verizon, BellSouth, Qwest and SBC — to lease their networks at low prices to competitors such as AT&T and MCI.

The regionals balked, saying the rules left them at a competitive disadvantage, and in March, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia threw out the rules.

Consumer groups say that vacating the rules could lead to higher phone bills for millions. (AP)

Police Say City's Safe This Week

WASHINGTON | City officials are reassuring residents and tourists concerned about safety during the Ronald Reagan funeral events.

"We have not received any information at all that would lead us to believe that this event has been targeted in any way for any kind of terrorist activity," Metropolitan Police Chief Charles H. Ramsey said Wednesday. His counterpart at the U.S. Capitol Police, Chief Terrence W. Gainer, predicted as many as 200,000 people might get a chance to see the coffin lying in state at the Capitol.

Ramsey insisted that the extra police presence downtown would not leave the city's neighborhoods at risk.

"We have more than enough people to be able to handle both the event as well as regular neighborhood patrols," Ramsey said.

Officials said they hoped as many as 5,000 people an hour will be able to file past Reagan's casket when 34 hours of public viewing begins Wednesday. DERRILL HOLLY (AP)

Heat Doesn't Deter Crowds

32 hospitalized waiting for Reagan procession

WASHINGTON | You never know when that Mylar sleeping bag is going to come in handy.

Beth and Judy Roland grabbed one before they got on a plane from Chicago to Washington on Wednesday to get a glimpse of Ronald Reagan's casket at the U.S. Capitol. The two sisters were among the first in line at around noon, just as the steamy Washington sun began pushing the mercury into the low 90s.

The Rolands were also among the coolest in line — after they rigged a makeshift tarp out of the Mylar sheet so they could hide underneath from the sun.

Others were not so fortunate.

D.C. Fire and Emergency Medical Services Department spokesman Alan Etter said that by early evening 100 people on the Mall had been treated for heat-related illnesses. Some went to a medical tent, while others called 911. Paramedics took 32 people to hospitals, including two in serious condition, Etter said.

First aid and cooling tents were set up around the Capitol, and more doctors were being called in for duty later this week. Metro also planned to station air-conditioned buses along Constitution Avenue for people who need to cool down. CRAIG MAURO (AP)

Fairfax Ready for Muhammad Trial

FAIRFAX, VA. | Convicted sniper John Allen Muhammad, already on death row for his role in a killing spree that left 10 people dead, will face a second death-penalty prosecution beginning this month.

Fairfax County officials said Wednesday that Muhammad will be arraigned June 22 on capital murder charges stemming from the slaying of FBI analyst Linda Franklin outside a Home Depot on Oct. 14, 2002.

Muhammad's accomplice in the sniper killings, Lee Boyd Malvo, was convicted and sentenced to life in prison for Franklin's slaying.

Muhammad earlier was convicted in another Virginia county and sentenced to death for the Oct. 9, 2002, murder of Dean Harold Meyers near Manassas. (AP)

Court Rejects Oken's Plea

ANNAPOLIS, MD. | The Court of Appeals refused Wednesday to delay the execution of Steven Oken, who is scheduled to die next week for the 1987 rape and murder of a Baltimore County woman.

In a brief order, six of the seven judges rejected arguments by Oken's lawyer, Fred Warren Bennett, that the method of execution was illegal and that Oken's death would violate a federal constitutional provision against cruel and unusual punishment.

In his dissent, Chief Judge Robert Bell said there are "material and significant inconsistencies" between the law and the method of execution proposed to be used by the state. Oken was sentenced to die for the rape and murder of Dawn Marie Garvin. He also was convicted of murdering another woman in Maryland and a motel clerk in Maine. TOM STUCKEY (AP)

Metro Sees Heavy Ridership For Reagan Memorial Events

Metrorail ridership was running high Wednesday, with a number of people apparently heeding police advice and using mass transit for events surrounding former President Ronald Reagan's death. As of 6 p.m., 626,737 trips had been taken on the subway. That was up 78,715 from the same time Tuesday. Metro spokeswoman Lisa Farbstein said if the trend continued until closing time at midnight, it could be a top 10 ridership day. (AP)

Bryant Gives Lakers Shot in the Arm

'Crushed' Detroit heads home wondering if it can stop Los Angeles

NBA FINALS | One shot has drastically changed the dynamics of the NBA Finals. The question now for the Detroit Pistons is whether they'll let it affect them in Game 3 the way it did in overtime of Game 2.

Distraught and disgusted with themselves after their heartbreaking defeat, the Pistons boarded a plane and headed home immediately after Tuesday night's game.

But instead of returning with a 2-0 lead and a superb chance to pull off one of the most stunning upsets in league history, they're tied 1-1 and wondering how they let a six-point lead slip in the final 40 seconds.

One series-altering shot can sap the life out of a team, as evidenced by what happened to the San Antonio Spurs in the second round: Derek Fisher's Game 5 buzzer-beater swung the momentum the Lakers' way, and they finished off the Spurs in six games.

"We'll see," Bryant said. "The difference there was we were coming home. Now we're going on the road."

Judging by what the Pistons had to say after Game 2, the mental hurdle will be a significant obstacle to overcome. "You know, we're crushed," Pistons head coach Larry Brown said.

Games 3, 4 and 5 will be played at The Palace before a sellout crowd that has waited almost a decade and a half for its team to make it to this stage. Game 3 is Thursday, Game 4 is Sunday and Game 5 is Tuesday before the series returns to Los Angeles — unless one of the teams wins all three games.

CHRIS SHERIDAN (AP)

NOTHING BUT NET: Kobe Bryant swished a 3-pointer Tuesday to force overtime, which gave the Lakers a chance to avert a second-straight loss to the Pistons.

Doping Scandal Rocks U.S.

Montgomery, Jones vow to fight if blocked from Summer Games

DOPING | While Marion Jones was not among four athletes to receive letters of possible drug violations, the U.S. Anti-Doping Agency isn't done yet with the Olympic sprinting champion.

The sweeping drug scandal, which already has taken down four top athletes, now threatens to bar several more — and Jones remains under investigation.

So, when the U.S. track and field team for the Athens Olympics is chosen in July, there's no telling who will be allowed to show up.

BJORN TILLY/AP

Jones's boyfriend, 100-meter record holder Tim Montgomery, was among four prospective Olympians who received letters on Tuesday informing them that the USADA is pursuing possible doping cases against them that could result in bans from the Athens Games.

Montgomery's lawyer, Cristina Arguedas, said her client has done nothing wrong and that he will fight any attempt to keep him from running in the U.S. Olympic trials or the Summer Games.

"It is fundamentally unfair to try to take away an athlete's reputation, their work and their dreams based on meager information, flimsy documents and a flawed process," Arguedas said.

Jones, too, has threatened to sue if the USADA tries to bar her from the Olympics. ROB GLOSTER (AP)

Dragila's Vault Not the World Record

RECORDS | When Stacy Dragila pole vaulted higher than any woman ever had at an outdoor meet, she celebrated what she believed was a world record.

But the International Association of Athletics Federations said Wednesday that while it acknowledged the feat as the best outdoor mark, it shouldn't count as a "world record." The IAAF recognizes the best indoor or outdoor performance as the record.

Dragila, the 2000 Olympic gold medalist, cleared 15 feet, 10 inches Tuesday. But Russia's Yelena Isinbayeva cleared 15 feet, 11 1/4 inches at the world indoor championships in March. (AP)

NBC Aims to Make the Olympics Much-See TV

TELEVISION | NBC's blanket coverage of the 2004 Olympics in Athens just got a little thicker.

The network said Wednesday it was planning an additional 399 hours of Olympics programming this summer for a total of 1,210 hours, or more time on the air than the last five Summer Games combined.

Most of the extra hours are accounted for by a limited number of sports that will be shown in high-definition television on the network's digital affiliates. Swimming, diving, gymnastics, track & field and medal games in men's basketball and soccer will be shown on HDTV in a 24-hour tape loop.

Between NBC, CNBC, MSNBC, Bravo and USA, viewers will be able to see English-language broadcasts all day and night. Telemundo will provide Spanish-language highlights each day from 1 to 8 p.m. ET.

Much of the more than 300 hours of live coverage will be confined to the daytime on the cable affiliates because of the time difference in the U.S. with Athens.

The prime-time NBC broadcasts will be heavy on swimming, gymnastics and track & field, plus feature stories on athletes, said Dick Ebersol, NBC Sports chairman. (AP)

GO, GIRL: After two marriages, two kids, a handful of faiths, a billion photo shoots, a dozen or so records and a hundred years in the spotlight, Madonna still looks fierce.

Queen Be

The smartest woman in pop just wants to dance

MUSIC | Lock up your good ideas — Madonna's coming to town.

Then again, don't bother. She's already had them. She's having your best idea right now, the million-dollar one that taps right into whatever's right around the bend in the Zeitgeist, and she's turning it into a carnival-girlie show-political statement-dance party spectacle with a bigger wardrobe budget than you can dream of. Yep, she's humming the tune for the hit single right now, so just give it up.

She's the smartest woman in pop and, despite the babies, the phony

English accent, the cinematic misfires and the trying too hard, she always will be.

And don't try to blame a generation of Britneys on Madonna. (Not that there's anything wrong with Britney; we're not made of stone.) Pop tarts have been a chart staple ever since pop existed; it's only when they started showing more bosom and belly that critics began to be unable to differentiate the Lesley Gores from the Willa Fords. Madonna learned more from David Bowie and MGM than she ever did from "The Loco-Motion."

It's hard to remember now, 20-plus years into her reign, how extraordinary her disco-dolly singles sounded when they hit the airwaves beginning in 1982. Sure, the stuff was dizzy and dancable, but it homed directly on a target audience — gay men and club kids responding to the bittersweet, end-of-a-Golden-Age dance tunes like "Holiday" and "Everybody."

She moved beyond tartdom, claiming the role with such intensity that she immediately rendered it ironic, then spent years toying with the idea of the singer as silver screen icon, dominatrix, peep-show girl, CEO of Take Charge, Sisters, Incorporated.

She married and divorced and released one of her finest albums, the pain-wracked self-help masterpiece "Like a Prayer." Scented with horrible patchouli — literally — the record picked apart her conubial disaster and recovery in brilliant strokes that played darkness against light.

And that's her secret. Madonna's an oddity as a dance-music superstar because she always, only and ever sang of her own life and emotions, whatever breezy melody she set them to. For someone frequently called a chameleon, we know her awfully well: her loves, her loneliness, her sexual restlessness, her identification with outsiders, her frustrations with fame and her abandon in the sanctifying square of the dance floor. ERIC COLEMAN

Graphically Novel

MF Doom is a man of many cartoonish aliases, all talented

MUSIC | Here's hoping the comic-book lawyers never catch up to Daniel Dumile.

The celebrated New York MC just can't keep his hand out of the pop-culture cookie jar. Each time he digs in, it seems he comes up with a different alias. Sunday, he appears at the 9:30 Club as MF Doom.

The MF is for "Metal Face" or "Metal Fingers," both traits of body-armored Marvel bad-die Doctor Doom, né Victor Von Doom, alias Vincent Vaughn. Onstage, Dumile hides his identity behind a metal mask. When he isn't MF Doom or King Geedorah, he's Viktor Vaughn.

Dumile's sticky fingers extend far past his stage names. His largely self-produced 1999 disc "Operation: Doomsday" found him chopping up the "Scooby Doo" theme for "Hey!" and working Steely Dan's "Black Cow" into "Gas Drawls." Cartoon-soundtrack skits featuring Doctor Doom pepper both that album and last year's Viktor Vaughn release "Vaudeville Villain."

Though the skits continue on the new disc "Madvillainy," this time the production is the province of Doom's Madvillain collaborator, Madlib. In addition to sampling, the West Coast crate-digger throws in a variety of unorthodox instrumentation, from flexatone (a little spring steel-and-ball device that makes a "tickatocka" sound) to accordion.

With his raspy voice and viscous flow, Doom slyly name-checks everyone from Lt. Worf to Dick Dastardly and Muttley.

Doom opens for Talib Kweli, who half a decade ago was half of Black Star. With former partner Mos Def gone Hollywood, Kweli goes it alone. Expect to hear from the forthcoming "Beautiful Struggle," whose release was pushed back when it was leaked online. GLENN DIXON

Maggie, the Cat's Meow

STAGE | "You were a wonderful lover ..."

These words, said by a beautiful young woman wearing only a slip and mopping her lily-white neck, have inflamed the hearts of theatergoers for more than 50 years.

They have no effect on the person to whom they're addressed — Brick, the hunky, tormented husband of Maggie, who's so het up with frustration and need she's, why, she's like a cat on a hot tin roof.

The Kennedy Center's Tennessee Williams festival continues with "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof," the most sensual, funny and fraught of the playwright's hothouse dramas.

HERE, KITTY KITTY: Maggie (Mary Stuart Masterson) futilely drapes herself all over tormented Brick (Jeremy Davidson) in the Kennedy Center's "Cat on a Hot Tin Roof."

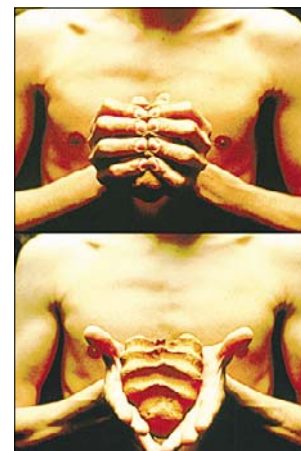

Mary Stuart Masterson takes the role of the feline would-be seductress Maggie, futilely vamping her husband (Jeremy Davidson), as they await their spoils at Brick's daddy's death — uh, birthday party.

Whatever Mark Lamos's direction choices, the play is bound to be a crowd-pleaser; it's like witnessing the worst party ever, where everyone soldiers on while we cringe.

As Big Daddy approaches a reckoning with his Maker and, worse, his family, we begin to see how patiently Maggie has suffered for her misguided love. It's a testament to the character of that stalking, suffering woman that we keep going back to watch her little paws get burned. (EXPRESS)

Artists Sally Mann and August Sander focus on landscapes

MUSEUMS | Two extraordinary photography shows come to Washington this weekend, both landscape-heavy works from artists better known for their images of figures and faces.

Sally Mann's latest work using the 19th-century view cameras that give her work startling precision and dreamlike bluriness is "What Remains." The five-piece suite is a study in entropy whose subjects range from a beloved dog's remains to a Civil War battlefield to moldering corpses in a forensics lab. They're thoughtful and lovely, and if they're a bit too romantic, that has always been Mann's most charming flaw.

The Phillips Collection hosts the great early 20th-century German photographer August Sander, who was most famous for trying to create a grand composite portrait of Germany through images of its people. The Phillips show is of Sander's later work, stately studies of the landscape around Cologne taken in the late 1930s. (EXPRESS)

Sally Mann: What Remains, Corcoran Gallery of Art, 500 17th St. NW; opens Sat., June 12, through Sept. 6; 202-639-1700. (Farragut West)

Also, Sally Mann: Last Measure, is at Hemphill Fine Arts, 1027 33rd St. NW; through July 31; 202-342-5610.

You Friar, You Brought 'Er

OUT & ABOUT | It may be true, as Monty Python said, that nobody expects the Spanish Inquisition. What's certain is that nobody expected the Spanish Inquisition to be so diverting.

Nuns expert in synchronized swimming! Chorus lines of tonsured monks! Oh, wait—that's the Mel Brooks version. The real Spanish Inquisition probably had less singing and was a little sloppier in its choreography.

In any case, the Smithsonian Resident Associate Program is making it possible to journey back to the days when the church tackled heresy by getting medieval on dissident and heathen alike. On Saturday, John Vidmar brings his daylong seminar "The Inquisition" to the Mall.

A Dominican Friar and church scholar, Vidmar will separate historical fact from showbiz fancy.

COURTESY SMITHSONIAN ASSOCIATES

One of the least proud moments in Western history, preserved for the ages.

First, he'll rock the Inquisition old-school style, tracing its roots to Roman law and checking out heretical developments from 300 to 1000 A.D. Then he's on the procedural tip with the judicially minded "Methods of the Medieval Inquisition." After lunch, which is BYOB (roasted meats not recommended), Vidmar sends a shout-out to his Iberian brothers. He'll explore the links between the Spanish Inquisition and the Reconquista, the turf war that resulted in the expulsion of the Moors from Spain.

The highlight, though, is sure to be "Methods and Extent of the Spanish Inquisition," which puts the screws to tales of torture. Unlike Leonard Bernstein's "Candide," Vidmar's lectures may not have you singing, "What a day, what a day for an auto-da-fe," but you'll at least know how Torquemada kept the beat. GLENN DIXON

Party of the People

OUT &, WELL, OUT | Miami has its White Party, which is all very nice, but we're not so exclusive up here; D.C.'s biggest gay party of the year is for everyone.

So hit the streets, boys, girls and everyone in between and beyond: It's Capitol Pride 2004.

The greater Washington GLBT community throws itself a party this weekend when the festival officially kicks off with Friday night's Big Top opening party, featuring a soundtrack from DJ Angelo Korte, Red Bull and beer specials.

But the real action takes place over the weekend. Saturday morning join the Burgundy Crescent Volunteers from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. for a "VoluPalooza," a fundraiser, side-walk festival, barbecue and, since Pride can't have an event without one, a DJ spinning tunes. All proceeds go to Burgundy Crescent, so down some 'cue, or some of those grilled portobello sandwiches and turkey burgers, with a clear conscience.

That evening, the streets of Northwest around Dupont Circle are cleared and the banners raised for the Annual Pride Parade, beginning at 6:30 p.m. Then work off the excitement at the Liquid Ladies of Pride kickoff dance party at Apex (beginning at 9 p.m.) or the 8 Track Flashback Retro Tea Dance at Cobalt's Friskie party. Bring a pair of dancing-ready feet and a date, or maybe just a pet rock, and groove to the tunes of DJ Jason Royce.

Pennsylvania Avenue is the site for this year's street festival; it's not until 11 a.m. on Sunday, plenty of time to clear up that hangover and enjoy the vendors and volunteer booths, food and beverages and, of course, music from the DJs.

With more than 200,000 people expected, you may run into someone you know.

Or a familiar-looking pet rock.

NEXT BIG ... HANG ON A SEC: Rooney wonders if America is finished with them yet.

It's Who You Know

MUSIC | SoCal rockers Rooney, at 9:30 on Friday, exist in the awkward purgatory between underground street cred and mainstream success.

Rooney's appearance early this year on the Fox teen soap "The O.C."

piqued America's collective interest; sales of its debut album rocketed up, MTV and MTV2 threw Rooney's video into heavy rotation.

With a polished power-pop sound and obligatory shaggy haircuts, Rooney seems poised to emerge from the current crop of indie rockers who, despite catchy hooks, have struggled to reach the flyover zone.

Lead singer/songwriter Robert Carmine is the brother of Jason Schwartzman, erstwhile indie movie star and former member of the band Phantom Planet, whose "California" provides the theme song for "The O.C." Hmm.

Rooney's track "Popstars" tags the Jessica Simpsons of the music world "unsophisticated money-machines," a bit rich considering Rooney's own well-connected hype-machine. If the band reaps mainstream success, such charges become moot. But the transition is sure to be uncomfortable.

STILL FLY: Mannie Fresh and “Baby” Williams show what it means to pimp hard.

Make It Big Tyme

MUSIC | Everybody “Get Your Roll On” to Dream nightclub, where down South rap duo Big Tymers will be doing it, well, big of course.

Once self-professed “average game spitters,” Big Tymers — composed of Cash Money co-founder Brian “Baby” Williams and producer Mannie Fresh — have really stepped up their game. Now, they can boast with the best of them.

Some say diligence matured the duo from the 1998 so-so debut “How You Luv That” to the “Big Money Heavyweights” they have become. Our guess: It’s just easier, not to mention more smooth, to rap about an E-Class when you’re actually driving one (or at least renting one for the video) — never mind that it has only a quarter tank of gas.

Teasing aside, lyricsmiths Baby and Fresh, with four albums behind them, are virtual dons of the dirty South rap game. They seem to have learned: Brag hard, brag harder, brag hardest and the cash money will come to you, as will the ability to syncopate your boasting to Fresh’s funky beats.

See the stunnas but please don’t touch the ice. These are two brothers that plan to remain, as they say, “Hood Rich.” DARONA WILLIAMS

Bollywood Branches Out

FILM | When first we meet Puneet, he's pouring himself out of a cab to sleep off a 16-hour bender. He's lost his girlfriend, his home and his brother.

Lest we fret, his voiceover tells us what else awaits him in Shashanka Ghosh's feature-film directorial debut, "Anything Can Happen" (Waisa Bhi Hota Hai), which screens Friday at the Freer Gallery.

The ineffectual advertising copywriter, played by Arshad Warsi, will inadvertently bring about the demise of two feared Bombay organized-crime gangs. We're left to surmise that some slap-happy Punjabi rappers will figure in somehow. A philosophical trio of coffee-shop patrons will follow along in the papers.

A noted ad man who helped bring MTV to India, Ghosh has put more than a little of himself into his protagonist, who insinuates himself into a milieu he doesn't quite understand and, though appealingly inept, still manages to get the job done.

In the credits, Ghosh thanks, among others, Takeshi Kitano, the Coen Brothers and Quentin Tarantino, but he can't yet boast the sureness of tone and pacing displayed by those adepts of the postmodern caper flick. At 138 minutes, "Anything Can Happen" is terse by Indian standards, but still it often feels as though everything that can happen will.

As might be expected of a film still beholden to the conventions it tweaks, the ham-handedly choreographed action sequences pack much less punch than the goofy musical numbers. One hopes that as Bollywood aims for a more international style it won't lose touch with its distinctive charms. GLENN DIXON

You Got to Believe

Citizen Cope makes laid-back alt-hip-hop charming and earnest

MUSIC | A decade ago, Citizen Cope joined Michael Ivey's Basehead as DJ, keyboardist and co-producer. He's continued to contribute to the alternative hip-hop act's records even as they became increasingly Christian, but the man born Clarence Greenwood has long sought his own spotlight.

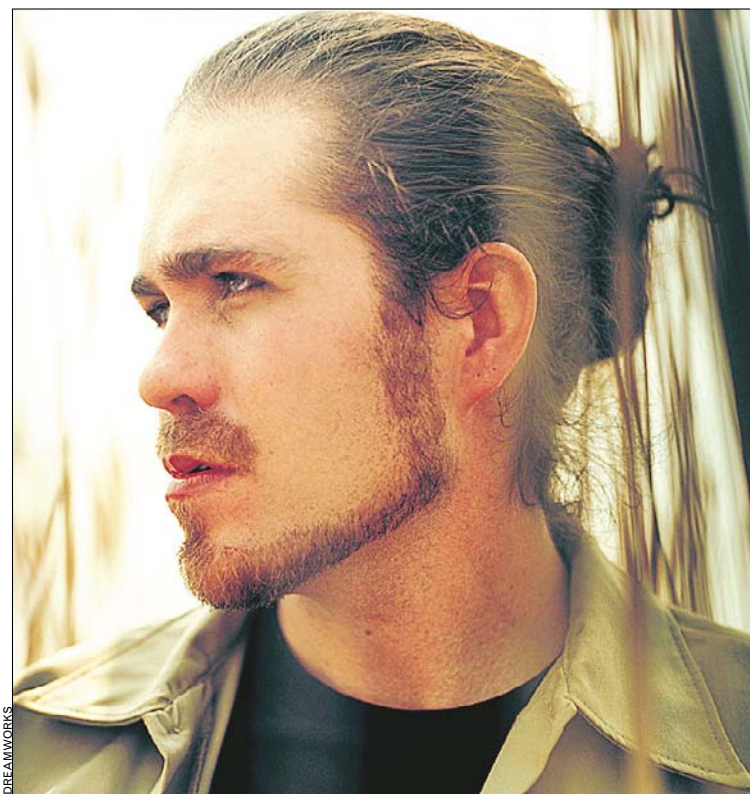

Many observers thought his self-titled 2002 Dreamworks disc would bring Cope's earnest yet laid-back amalgam of hip-hop, reggae, soul and folk to a wider public. It didn't work out, but he has been quick to rebound.

Already, another major label is allowing him to make his introduction. When he plays Iota Saturday night, he'll be supporting the new Arista release "The Clarence Greenwood Recordings."

We always get concerned when some white dude starts moaning about Babylon (actually, he sings about goings-on "down south of Babylon," so technically that's the suburbs). The good news is that Cope's blessed with the pipes to sell his pretensions.

Hismush-mouthed stoner croon is so convincing on "Sideways" that you may find yourself believing nonsense like, "Diamonds, they fade." (No, they don't.)

More plausible complaints, such as, "These feelings won't go away/They been knockin' me sideways," need no explanation.

HE MEANS IT, MAN: In a cynical music world, Clarence Greenwood keeps it real.

And when the hero of "D'Artagnan's Theme" can barely lift his head to boast of his exploits, you've got a feel-good feel-bad song to get you home after last call.

Opening are socially conscious reggae-folkie Abdel Wright, called by Bono "the most important Jamaican artist since Marley" (Ziggy, we're guessing), and Boston singer-songwriter Mieka Pauley, a nice young lady with a guitar.

LIVE ONLINE

Ask Tom

Washington Post Sunday Magazine columnist TOM SIETSEMA talks restaurants Wednesdays at 11 a.m. on washingtonpost.com/liveonline.

I always enjoy having a restaurant offer me an "amuse" — a complimentary treat from the kitchen between courses or at the beginning or end of a meal. Can you name some restaurants that keep their diners "amused"?

In Restaurant Eve's "chef's tasting room" in Old Town, dinners have been launched with such gratis welcomes as a shot glass of tomato water and a thin fold of squab. I love the finishing touch at 2941, in which diners are bid farewell with loaves of bread from the chef's father. Days after you've eaten there, you still recall the experience.

Bite-Sized

RECENTLY REVIEWED IN THE WASHINGTON POST

For the next few weeks, Express will feature Washington Post food critic Eve Zibart's wrap-ups of new restaurants in nearby beach towns.

Rehoboth, Del.

Yum-Yum has been replaced by Cafe Zeus (37 Wilmington Ave.; 302-226-0400), which is more continental-minded — scallops with crab sauce, fried ravioli — than its Greek name might suggest. More intriguingly, perhaps, it has added the Argos Bar to its already large courtyard and hosts Sunday tea dances. Mod-Mediterranean Espuma (28 Wilmington Ave. 302-227-4199), has been bought by chef Jay Caputo and given a lighter, more true-blue Med style. Nage, a new "upscale East Coast restaurant eatery" and gourmet carryout on Route 1, displays a fondness for Med flavors: tuna esca-beche with spicy fennel, crab galette with sweet mustard, Arctic char "in a brown bag," broiled rockfish with smoked oysters and Pernod spinach.

Coming to the Second Street end of Wilmington Avenue is Confucius

(57 Wilmington Ave.; 302-227-3848); it will feature whole lobster in ginger sauce, Peking duck and fried sea bass along with various old dependables. Since the old Peking Garden is being replaced by Madison's (123 Rehoboth Ave.; 302-226-0535), a family cafe offering burgers, sandwiches and seafood, Confucius will have sole claim on the Chinese-menu market.

Low-carbers, note: Dos Locos, which has moved to a larger space at the other end of the dining strip (10 Wilmington Ave.; 302-227-3353), is now offering Atkins-friendly Tex-Mex.

Eve Zibart's reviews appear Friday in the Post's Weekend section. This week: Ovations at Wolf Trap, an often very good buffet for those who don't have time to BYO to a show.

LOCKED OUT | ROCCO'S ROLLER COASTER

A MAN OUTSIDE:A state Supreme Court justice gave Rocco DiSpirito (of NBC's "The Restaurant," with Mama, right, and a fan) permission to enter Rocco's restaurant so he could take photos of himself for a cookbook. He needed a court order since his financial backers had barred him from entering.

ON TV TONIGHT

LORD OF THE WHO? You know the silly summer-movie season is in full swing when the 2004 MTV MOVIE AWARDS (9 p.m., MTV) look back at last year's already forgotten popcorn epics. Hey, I've already begun to forget this year's summer movies! You have to give the MTV movie awards credit for knowing that they carry no weight. Why, it's already over (see photo, right)! The results will have been announced by the time you read this. It's just so five days ago.

REAGAN WAS PRESIDENT? Turner Classic Movies commemorates the passing of former president Ronald Reagan with a daylong marathon of his movies, beginning with the 1937 drama LOVE IS ON THE AIR (8 a.m.). The gritty 1942 potboiler KINGS ROW (8 p.m.) is thought to contain Reagan's best film performance. Tonight's other Reagan films include

Ellen DeGeneres angles for a role in the Maguire-Dunst vehicle "Spiderman 2."

DESPERATE JOURNEY (10:15 p.m.) and THE LAST OUTPOST (12:15 a.m.). Reagan will be TCM's star of the month in October. Perhaps "Knut Rockne All American," "Dark Victory" with Bette Davis and "Hellcats of the Navy" will air then.

CAN'T A GIRL HAVE BOTH? JOAN OF ARCADIA (8 p.m., CBS) With Joan occupied on her divine rounds, Adam asks another girl out. A girl caught between God and a guy named Adam — where have we heard that story before?

CULT CHOICE WILD AT HEART (9 p.m., Showtime) An Elvis-obsessed drifter (Nicolas Cage) and his spitfire girlfriend (Laura Dern) hit the road to evade hit men and other weird happenstance in director David Lynch's 1990 feature. KEVIN MCDONOUGH (UNITED FEATURE SYNDICATE)

LAWSUITS

Is Everything Related To This Woman Weird Now?

ELIZABETH TAYLOR has settled a lawsuit filed by her former landscaper under undisclosed terms. Willem Van Muyden, who was dismissed in September 2002, alleged that Taylor dismissed him after her butler, Jean-Luc Lacquement, urged her to in retaliation for Van Muyden's sexual rejection of him. (AP)

Let Me Tell You About My Gross Eating Habits

When he was a boy, BILL COSBY especially liked the taste of lemon-flavored Jell-O that had been sitting in the fridge for two weeks. "It was rubbery and chewy!" the 30-year Jell-O pitchman said Tuesday to the crowd gathered for his first trip to the Le Roy, N.Y., museum dedicated to the dessert. (AP)

OUR COURTNEY

Oh Yeah, She Has Some Unpaid Parking Tickets, Too

COURTNEY LOVE was charged with attacking a female friend of her former managers with a bottle and a flashlight, authorities said. The felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon stems from an April 25 incident at the Los Angeles home of former manager Jim Barber. An arrest warrant for Love was issued Wednesday, a district attorney spokeswoman said Tuesday. Love was not in custody, and it was unclear if she had been served with the warrant.

She has been charged in three other cases, including two that occurred hours apart in October. (AP)

"How thoughtful. It has 60 minutes and it ticks and everything. Thanks, guys."

RETIRES

'I've Been Here 36 Years. Give Me the Mantle Clock.'

CBS feted DON HEWITT, who has just stepped down as executive producer of "60 Minutes," on Tuesday night at a party in New York. Hewitt received the traditional retirement gift — a gold watch — but CBS was quick to emphasize that he'll still be working on special projects. CBS boss Leslie Moonves called Hewitt his idol, a status not diminished when Hewitt pitched him the worst idea for a sitcom that he had ever heard. (AP)

TO THE EDITOR

IT'S BAD ENOUGH that half the city is shutting down for the Reagan procession, thus costing its residents and business owners a lot of money. Now I read that there's a push to get Reagan's face on money ("Republicans Push for 'Reagan' Money," June 9). Where are our lawmakers' heads? There are Americans without jobs, without health care, without homes, and our elected officials are wasting time and taxpayer money worrying about where to put a former president's face?

—VALERIE FENTON
Washington, D.C.

I WRITE IN RESPONSE to your "Love Bites" item in Tuesday's People section in which you refer to Jeff Goldblum as a "former celebrity." What criteria could you possibly be using? Goldblum has been in more than 60 movies — more than 10 in the past five years. Two more will be released in the coming year. In the same item, you refer to Sylvester Stallone as a current celebrity. Stallone has been in fewer movies total, and fewer in the past five years. I and many others still admire Goldblum and follow his still very successful career.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) — Now is no time to run out. You must be willing to face an unexpected difficulty and address your concerns with unflinching honesty.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) — Take advantage of events that you could not have anticipated. Get ahead of the competition before the competition even gets started.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) — The unusual may be intriguing, but you were best to stick to those things that are familiar and comfortable. Don't get too daring all at once.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) — Distance from someone who has been important to you may be affecting your mood. Consider reopening the lines of communication.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) — Any overreaction on your part will cause a fuss so keep your emotions under control at all times.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) — You'd better be ready to come up with something that fascinates and excites, or those in power may surprise you by looking elsewhere.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — You'll be pleased with your own work and eager to share what you've learned with someone who is getting ever closer to you.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — You're feeling free and easy. Others will want to take advantage of your newfound openness and share ideas with you.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Your stamina is on the rise, and you should be able to put a little more energy and dedication into everything you undertake.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) — Adopt a frank, outspoken manner and you are likely to get exactly the responses you desire from those around you. Don't back down.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) — It's a good time for you to assume the upper hand, taking the opportunity to call the shots and lead things in the direction you choose.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) — Money management is the key to success. You may want to check and see if you're taking advantage of all the up-to-date tools and info.

Place in History

From washingtonpost.com/liveonline

DINESH D'SOUZA, author of "Ronald Reagan: How an Ordinary Man Became an Extraordinary Leader," and a former White House domestic policy analyst during Reagan's administration, was online Wednesday to discuss Reagan's life and presidency.

Where would you rank Reagan as a president?

Diplomat Clare Booth Luce once said that history will remember every president by only one line. Reagan will be remembered as the president who won the Cold War and revived the American economy and the American spirit. I would rank Reagan as one of the near-great or great presidents. I can't put him in the same league as Washington and Lincoln, but I'd put him in the next category with Jefferson, Teddy Roosevelt and FDR.

Already some say the coverage of Reagan is bordering on excessive. What are your thoughts on this?

The general rule is that one shouldn't say bad things when a man dies. But I don't entirely agree with this when it comes to public figures and especially presidents.

I would like to see a more lively debate over Reagan's policies. I believe this is the way he would have wanted it, as well. Reagan was a controversial figure in his day. Believe me, historians will fight hard over his place in history.

Is it ironic that Reagan, who was against big, wasteful government — despite all his defense spending — is being honored by giving federal workers another paid day off?

The economy will survive a day's holiday. Reagan's defense spending was not "wasteful." It helped bring about the Soviets appointing Gorbachev, who didn't want to get into an arms race with the United States that he couldn't afford. Even in economic terms, his defense hikes were more than repaid by the defense savings that resulted from the end of the Cold War.
